2.Preamble:

Nanotechnology is the science of dealing with atoms with only a few nanometers in dimensions. As the size of objects is scaled down to the nanometer regime, the material properties undergo a transformation, presenting a great potential for promising applications. Nanotechnology is considered more powerful than even the industrial revolution, with applications ranging from automobiles to medicine. Nanotechnology can be broadly classified into Nanomaterials, Nanoelectronics and the Nano-biotechnology

Nanotechnology is a multidisciplinary field in which the principles of technology are applied to solving problems in biology or medicine. It involves design of instruments, devices and software to bring together knowledge from many technical sources to develop new procedures or to conduct research needed, to solve clinical problems providing on overall enhancement of health care. In recent years, the confluence of nanotechnology and biomedical engineering has opened the doors to a bright future for nanomedicine. In the near future, the advancement in nanomedicine will deliver a valuable set of research tools and clinically helpful devices, such as drug delivery systems and new therapies

The Nanotechnology revolution is expected to pave way for computers billions of times more powerful than today's, and new medical capabilities that will heal and cure in cases that are currently considered as utterly hopeless. According to many of the recent estimates, Nanotechnology market is expected to cross US$ 1 Trillion by 2015.
